The International Summer Ski Jumping will take place at the Adler ski stadium for the 37th time.

By that, the Grand Prix will make two stops in Germany with the traditional competition in the Black Forest and the finale in Klingenthal.

As in the past year, in addition to a men's competition, a women's competition is also planned.

The German eagles are waved off for the first time by the new national coach Stefan Horngacher.

All fans and spectators will be able to experience Seefeld's heroes live after the summer break and enjoy the start of the new season in the Black Forest.

In addition to high-class ski jumping competitions, the audience can expect a colorful supporting program as well as the Europa-Park FIS Youth Cup.
